MAN TO MAN

IT is improbable that any one expected great decisions would be made at the Vienna conference between President Kennedy and Mr Khrushchev. These two powerful and dynamic leaders met on even ground; they met for the first time in what was apparently a cordial atmosphere divorced from the unpleasantness which ruined the Paris summit conference before it had even started.

Neither side had any trump cards such as the unfortunate U-2 incident to play and one must assume that both leaders were feeling their way over the various problems which have been plaguing the world during the past few years.

It would appear that both Mr Kennedy and Mr Khrushchev got through their talks without any harsh words and this alone is reason for a measure of optimism, although such optimism must be regarded with caution.

Taken stock

THE best that can be said is that the two leaders have made each other's acquaintance and know exactly where they stand.

They have undoubtedly taken stock of each other and now must have a better idea of what East and West is prepared to tolerate.

The possibility of miscalculation and floundering into a nuclear war has been reduced and there should be widespread relief throughout the world that there can be no misunderstanding of motives in either camp.

As far as Mr Khrushchev is concerned, he has accomplished his mission and made an assessment of the young man who has taken over the leadership of the opposition to communism.

The same, of course, can be said of President Kennedy. He has taken his opponent's measure and is under no illusions about the man from the Kremlin.

Made clear

THE communique issued after the meeting did not reveal a single thing, but it was made abundantly clear in the first place that there would not be any spectacular announcements. Yet it seems that there is an air of disappointment in some quarters about the reticence and lack of information.

What did these people expect? Declarations on Laos, Berlin and other thorny problems?

None of these problems can be resolved by the United States and the Soviet Union by themselves. They are matters concerning the other great powers and as far as President Kennedy is concerned he has never been given carte blanche to speak on behalf of his friends in the West.

The Western powers have been briefed and the President has made his report. The inside story remains a top secret, but at least we know America's new leader is on speaking terms with Moscow which is better than the dangerous situation created during the last days of the former President.

'A very sober two days' he says KENNEDY REPORTS ON VIENNA

No advantage or concession gained or given

Washington, June 6. President Kennedy tonight described his meeting with Mr Khrushchev in Vienna as "a very sober two days" in which "no advantage or concession was either gained or given."

In a nationwide television broadcast from the White House, he said: "No major decision was either planned or taken. No spectacular progress was either achieved or pretended." He said that he and Mr Khrushchev did not plan any future summit meetings, but said his Vienna talks had been "useful."

President Kennedy said:

- The talks led to no hopes for progress on the Geneva East-West talks on a nuclear test ban, which had been "struck a serious blow."
- The most sombre part of the talks was on Germany and West Berlin. He said he made it clear that the U.S. was determined to maintain Western rights in Berlin at any risk, and that a binding German peace treaty was a matter for all who were at war with Germany.
- He hoped progress could be made in the next few days in the 14-nation Geneva conference on Laos.

Results

As a result of the talks, he said, at least the chance of a dangerous miscalculation by either side "should now be less."

President Kennedy said that, generally, Mr Khrushchev did not talk in terms of war—"he believes the world will move his way without recourse to war."

He added: "Our hopes for an end to nuclear tests, for an end to the spread of nuclear weapons and for some slowing down in the arms race have been struck a serious blow."

He said his one-day visit to London was "a strong reminder that the West remains united in its determination to hold to its standards."

Mr Kennedy described his trip as an "unforgettable experience."

He paid tribute at the start of his report to the generosity and heartwarming greetings by the people of Paris, Vienna and London.

He expressed gratitude for the kindness shown him and his wife, and knew that the good wishes given to him were for the country he represented, which he described as the chief defender of freedom.

Secure

The President said: "My talks with President de Gaulle were profoundly encouraging to me. Certain differences in our attitude on one or another problem became insignificant in view of our common understanding."

He added that he believed that the alliance between the United States and France had become more secure and that the relations between himself and General de Gaulle had become closer and, he hoped, more confident.

The President, discussing his Vienna talks, said that he and Mr Khrushchev did not plan any future summit meetings.

He wound up his talk with the Soviet leader in these words: "Mr Khrushchev and I had a very frank and frank exchange of views on major issues which now divide our two countries. I will tell you now, it was a very sober two days."

"There was no discourtesy, no loss of temper, no threats or ultimatums on either side."

The President said that the kind of informal exchange he had with Mr Khrushchev may not be as exciting as a formal summit conference, but it was not intended to be one and neither did we plan any future summit meetings."

Before he turned to the Vienna talks, the President, continuing his remarks about his visit to France, said he believed his talks with General de Gaulle had removed certain doubts and apprehensions.

THREAT OF STORM PASSES

The tropical depression which was 180 miles southwest of Hongkong at 7 this morning, degenerated into an area of low pressure over Hainan and the Gulf of Tonkin by 9 am today. There will be no further warnings on this storm, said the Royal Observatory, unless it re-intensifies.

Pressure is high over China and over the Pacific to the south of Japan.

AIR SEARCH FOR HK-BOUND SHIP

The Chinese Nationalist 396-ton freighter, Tian Shyang, was still missing in the Formosa Straits this afternoon despite an intensive air-sea search launched today.

The ship, reported overdue on Monday, left Kaohsiung, Southern Formosa, at noon on Sunday, and was to have arrived in Hongkong on Monday night.

Colony agents for the ship, the Far Eastern Navigation Company, told a China Mail reporter that they had learned of the search during a long-distance telephone conversation with the Wan Shun Steamship Co. Ltd., owners of the Tian Shyang.

POSITION

Her last radioed position was some 100 miles off Kaohsiung.

The Tian Shyang, on the regular route between Hongkong and Kaohsiung, carried 345 tons of vegetables, bananas, sugar, cement, livestock, and general cargo for the Colony. There were no passengers.

Japanese Govt won't force bill SOCIALISTS, VIOLENCE WIN A VICTORY

Tokyo, June 7. Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party decided today not to force a controversial anti-political violence bill through the Upper House of Parliament in a move that was a major victory for the opposition Socialist Party and street violence.

The bill, which had already passed the Lower House of Parliament, would have outlawed the very type of violent political demonstrations which were staged against the Bill yesterday.

The bill was made against a backdrop of demonstrations in which 85,000 leftist-led labour regulars, mostly between Hongkong and Kaohsiung, carried 345 tons of vegetables, bananas, sugar, cement, livestock, and general cargo for the Colony. There were no passengers.

The bill will now come up before an extraordinary session of the Diet which will be called when Premier Hayato Ikeda returns from a visit to the U.S. He leaves for Washington on June 19.

Sources said that one reason Mr Ikeda agreed not to force the anti-violence bill through the current session was that he feared leftist demonstrations at the airport when he leaves for Washington. In Mr Ikeda's opinion this would lower his prestige in the U.S. just at a time when it should be highest.

When his predecessor, former Premier Kishi, left for Washington last year to sign the controversial U.S.-Japan security treaty, Zengakuren students tore up the airport terminal and forced Mr Kishi's party to enter the airport through a little used back gate.

Mr Ikeda did not want a repetition of this.—UPI.

After discussing his experience he declared: "We are looking forward to making more flights, ballistic and orbital, in the very near future."

In his prepared remarks, Commander Shepard had simply said that he and the other six astronauts were looking forward to more such flights in the future."

His spoken comment lent weight to speculation that the United States, now trying to catch up with the space lead of the Soviet Union set by Major Yuri Gagarin's historical orbital flight, would try to hurl a man round the world before the stated goal of the end of this year.

The astronaut also said that he took no drugs or stimulants during the jolting rocket-borne flight through space.

He said the journey had shown what an "undoped, undrugged human being" could do in a space capsule hurtling through the cosmos.—Reuter.

U.S. to hurl man into orbit in near future

Shepard—No difficulty

Washington, June 6. Commander Alan Shepard today hinted that the United States might put a man into space on a round-the-world flight fairly soon.

The American astronaut, the second man to fly through space, was speaking at a press conference at the end of a one-day meeting of doctors and engineers analysing the technical problems of his sub-orbital space flight on May 5.

Earlier he and other space experts had disclosed in scientific papers presented at the session that vibrations through his helmet had been so severe for a time that his vision was blurred for a few seconds.

The astronaut said later in explanation that his vision had not been completely blurred. The period of vibration lasted 15 seconds and it varied in intensity. He was able to conduct observations and transmissions during the period.

In his prepared remarks the astronaut said that this "problem for future flights" could be avoided by certain technical adjustments.

Was Japan forced to accept voluntary quotas?

Ottawa, June 6. Canadian Finance Minister Mr Donald Fleming today took exception to remarks attributed to Japanese Ambassador Mr Toru Hagiwara in saying that his country had been forced to accept voluntary quotas on exports under the threat that Canada, otherwise, would have resorted to measures such as arbitrary fixation of value for customs purposes.

We are not very happy with this situation," the Japanese Ambassador was reported to have said while in Regina, Saskatchewan.

Asked to comment on the report, Dr Fleming told the House of Commons that the statement was "somewhat surprising" and its tone "not in harmony" with the letter from the Ambassador informing him of the decision arrived at by the Japanese government.

Zanzibar, June 6. Zanzibar's racial strife flared again early today when Africans attacked an Arab family living in a village and hacked the persons to death. Africans killed another Arab in a pre-dawn attack and an African, wounded in earlier riots, died to bring the death toll in five days of rioting to 65, with hundreds of others injured and more than 600 persons arrested.—UPI.

Reaffirming Canada's position on the matter, Mr Fleming said he looked forward to the expansion of two-way trade between his country and Japan.

Problem of rising prices

EXPERTS TACKLE ISSUE OF EUROPEAN INFLATION

Paris, June 6.
 "Yes, but what's sending prices up?" One can almost hear the indulgent chuckles as some heckler calls this question out at a political meeting—and visualise the orator flexing his knees as he prepares a crushing response. It is the sort of question any saloon bar economist finds child's play to answer. To the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC), it is more complex.

For the last eight years, on its behalf, a group of independent economic experts has been making an extensive study of the experiences of the 29 OEEC members and associated countries in an endeavour to find out what causes rising prices. They have just made their report.

The economists include Dr Milton Gilbert, economic adviser to the Bank of International Settlements in Basle; Professor Bent Hansen, Director of the Stockholm National Institute for Economic Research; Professor Richard Kahn, of Cambridge University, and Professor Pieter de Wolff, director of the Central Plan Bureau of the Hague.

The purpose of the report, besides isolating causes of higher prices, is to help solve European inflation problems. The experts agree that inflation cannot be solved once and for all and needs constant attention. But some of its dangers can be eliminated.

FOUR REASONS

Four things, the experts find, cause prices to go up. The first is a series of special factors such as relaxation of rent controls, increases in excise duties (or cuts in subsidies) and bad harvests. Cost of living indexes in all countries were somewhat affected by these special factors, but the effects generally were not continuous, nor particularly spectacular over the whole eight years covered. The experts do not consider price increases due to such factors to be inflation. Therefore, they do not believe there should be a general government policy to suppress them. The complete economic situation, they insist, must be considered in judging whether there are inflationary forces at work. The cost of living index alone is an uncertain indication.

EXCESS DEMAND

The second cause of rising prices is excess demand, which puts a strain on productive resources and leads to a 'bidding up' of prices and wages. In some European countries—including France—excess demand has sometimes been so extreme as to dominate the rise of prices. In these extreme cases, the root of the trouble was unsound government financing and this condition, the experts say, must be cured to restore price stability. But in most OEEC countries including Britain the excess of demand has been much milder and then only for relatively brief periods.

To manage these situations of excess demand more effectively, the report says, Britain and the European countries need to use the tax and monetary controls more effectively and promptly. Failure is usually because too little is done too late.

WAGES POLICY

The experts, however, could not agree on how to deal with wage-cost inflation. The majority considers the first essential to be for the government to lay down a wages policy for private and public industry just like a monetary or tax policy. The purpose would be to give guidance to the large monopolistic groups that now dominate the labour market.

This, the majority of the experts insists, does not mean wage control. The basis should be a clearly marked wages policy in the public sector of the economy. The minority of the experts is reluctant to have governments interfere with wages in private industry, it hopes that wage increases will be more moderate in the future.

The fourth cause of rising prices is increases brought about by monopolistic producers seeking higher profits, the report says. This has been a significant cause of rising prices in European industries as a whole since 1952, the experts found. The report concludes that in general, administered prices increases cannot be a cause of continuing inflation, and it recommends greater competition, both domestic and foreign, as the principal means of dealing with this problem.

The President described his talks with Mr Khrushchev as "useful" and said he hoped progress could be made in the next few days in the 14-nation Geneva conference on Laos.

"No such hope emerged however with regard to the other conferences on a nuclear test treaty," he said.

The President added that Mr Khrushchev had made it clear there could not be a neutral administrator of the proposed control machinery because in his opinion no one was truly neutral.

Nevertheless, he added, the talks were too important for the United States to abandon the draft treaty it had proposed in the Geneva talks.

Mr Khrushchev had presented his position on Berlin in detail, and the Soviet Prime Minister's presentation would be the subject of further communication.

Certain

A binding German peace treaty was a matter for all who were at war with Germany, and United States and its allies could not abandon its obligations to the people of West Berlin.

"Generally, Mr Khrushchev did not talk in terms of war," President Kennedy said. "He believes the world will move his way without recourse to war."

The President said that as the chief executive of the United States it was his duty to make decisions that no adviser and no ally could make for him.

Therefore, it was of immense importance that he knew Mr Khrushchev and that he get as much insight and understanding of his attitude on present and future policies.

At the same time he wanted to make certain Mr Khrushchev knew his country and its policies.

He wanted to present American policies realistically and with an opportunity for discussion and clarification.

"This was done," the President said, and at least the chances of a dangerous miscalculation on either side should now be less.

The President said Mr Khrushchev told him there were many disasters throughout the world, and he should not be blamed for all of them.

The President agreed, saying that not all anti-American riots were Communist-inspired, but the Communists moved in to exploit these incidents.

He made a strong plea for his foreign aid programme and commented that the United States must react not only to Communist actions but to help others to live a better life.

The President said that his one-day visit to London was "a strong reminder at the end of a long journey that the West remains united in its determination to hold to its standards."

The President spoke for 24 minutes.—Reuter.

Workers favour freedom

Vallotta, June 6. Malta's General Workers' Union today declared itself in favour of obtaining independence for the island "so the people shape their own destiny without outside interference."

The Union, which also "strongly rejected" constitutional proposals, thus aligned itself with Maltese Labour Party policy.

The final results of elections during the Annual General Conference show that the union's entire executive is now composed of active Labour Party supporters, none of whom are also Party executive members.

—China Mail Special.

Mr Khrushchev, in his most jovial, joke-cracking mood, was kissed by girls dancing an Indonesian cha-cha-cha when he attended the 60th birthday party for President Sukarno of Indonesia here tonight.

The Soviet leader grabbed Dr Sukarno's gold-tipped ebony cane to beat time to the music, and was generally the life and soul of the party held in the garden of the Indonesian embassy here.

He danced and wisecracked for about half an hour, and even when rain began to fall and other guests made indoors Mr Khrushchev's spirits were by no means dampened.

AFTER VIENNA

It was just one day after his return from Vienna and his talks with President Kennedy. He had not been in such joyful form at such a function for some years.

Mr Khrushchev made no political speeches nor were his wisecracks very political in nature.

The fun began when the Soviet Premier came out into the garden with President Sukarno, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan and other Soviet leaders, the Indonesian Defence Minister, General Abdul Haris Nasution, and also there.

Mr Frolov Kozlov, a top Communist Party official, who has been away from Moscow recovering from a heart attack, talked fluently and well. He told his friends: "It was quite a serious illness but I have got over it now."

Mr Mikhail Suslov, Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, and Mr Andrey Gromyko, Soviet Foreign Minister, were seen in close conversation with the Communist Chinese Ambassador, and meanwhile Mr Khrushchev was dancing in a circle with Dr Sukarno.

A group of Indonesians began beating drums and to the accompaniment of hand clapping they sang: "Indonesia is free, cha-cha-cha."

Dr Sukarno then grabbed one of the onlookers and began to dance on the grass.

President Brezhnev joined in and Mr Khrushchev poked Mr Mikoyan in the ribs to get him on his feet.

The crowd of diplomats and Russian officials called out "Nikita Sergeyevich," but the Soviet Prime Minister grinned and shook his head.

NINA JOINS IN

Mrs Nina Khrushchev, the Premier's wife sat beside him, tapping her feet to the music.

The Laotian neutralist leader Prince Souvanna Phouma, smoking a pipe, and the pro-Communist leader Prince Souphanouvong, also sat in the circle.

Mr Khrushchev grabbed one by the hand and led her over to Dr Sukarno, and rather shyly she kissed the Indonesian leader and received Mr Khrushchev's thanks for "upholding the honour of the Russian people."

Mr Khrushchev waved the President's ebony cane at Mr Mikoyan again and said "you must work."—Reuter.

MORE KISSING

They did the same for President Brezhnev and Mr Mikoyan after a good deal of prompting by Mr Khrushchev.

Eventually the Soviet Prime Minister asked whether there weren't any Russian girls willing to do the same.

Mr Khrushchev grabbed one by the hand and led her over to Dr Sukarno, and rather shyly she kissed the Indonesian leader and received Mr Khrushchev's thanks for "upholding the honour of the Russian people."

Mr Khrushchev waved the President's ebony cane at Mr Mikoyan again and said "you must work."—Reuter.

CHARGE

Speaking in his own defence, 42-year-old Bigot, who was born in Algeria, said: "There was a threshold I would not cross." He said he would not welcome Algerian rebel leader Ferhat Abbas on his airfield.

"When I joined the army at the age of 18 and a half, I did not sign up for such contracts as that. I was not beaten by force of arms. I cannot accept that."

He was charged with having known of the insurrection plot on April 10, with having ordered the arrest of the air force commander of the Constantine zone, who would not go over to the rebels, and with ordering the capture of the plane carrying French Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe on a fact-finding visit to Algeria, by "any means."—AFP.

15 YEARS' JAIL FOR PART IN REVOLT

Paris, June 6. A high military tribunal today sentenced ex-General Pietro Bigot to 15 years of criminal detention for his part in the April 22 military insurrection.

ALGIERS

Bigot threw the support of the French Air Force in Algeria, which he commanded, behind the abortive four-day putsch.

The prosecution had demanded life imprisonment for Bigot. Ex-General Bigot, stripped of his rank, wore a dark grey civilian suit at his trial.

Portuguese claim another victory over natives

Lisbon, June 6. Insurgents in northern Angola suffered very heavy losses in an attack by Portuguese military forces on their headquarters "disguised as a hospital" in the Dambara area, the Portuguese news agency Lusitania reported today.

Lusitania said when Portuguese troops advanced on the headquarters, situated among huge rocks which made it difficult to reach, insurgents attacked with grenades.

The "hospital" was taken in a final assault, and the insurgents dispersed after suffering heavy casualties, abandoning considerable amounts of material and documents.

UNDERGROUND

The Portuguese commander, seeing the words "Hospital of the Union of the Peoples of Angola" (the UPA) on an underground organisation aiming at independence for Angola, ordered special precautions to avoid harming the patients.

But when the building was captured, it was full of barrels of gunpowder, various firearms mostly of foreign origin, and cutlasses. The authorities are investigating this to see if they can use the superstition as a weapon against the insurgents.—Reuter.

Lusitania also reported an insurgent attack on the village of Toto, in northern Angola, after villagers had arrested three insurgents. The villagers beat off the attack, killing over 20 insurgents. Two villagers were killed.

The agency said two Portuguese television cameramen managed to film the clash.

ATTACK

Lusitania also reported an insurgent attack on the village of Toto, in northern Angola, after villagers had arrested three insurgents. The villagers beat off the attack, killing over 20 insurgents. Two villagers were killed.

The agency also said that authorities in Dembos, another area of northern Angola, had noticed that insurgents looting arms in that area took care not to break any mirrors, apparently out of superstition.

The authorities are investigating this to see if they can use the superstition as a weapon against the insurgents.—Reuter.

Fire danger: city 'does not care'

London.
A fire chief has accused thousands of householders of not caring about the safety of their homes.

Mr. J. L. Johnson, chief of the fire brigade at Portsmouth.
"The City That Cares"—discovered that 22 fires were caused by faulty paraffin heaters last year.

One blaze was fatal, and Mr.
Johnson decided that the 60,000
householders of Portsmouth needed educating — especially when he heard that one man had set light to his house by filling his paraffin stove with petrol.

As a start, he offered 2,000
free leaflets on "do's and don'ts" to all oil heaters.

But after five months of publicity, Mr. Johnson still had 1,070 left on his hands.

He said: "It's amazing to think that fewer than 30 people out of 250,000 in Portsmouth should be sufficiently interested.
They just don't care about whether their home goes up in flames or not." — London Express Service.

An assistant magistrate's clerk,
45-year-old Robert Longman,

Andover, Hampshire, for stealing money.

The court was told the thefts were discovered after man

the court was asked why he was in arrears.—London Express

An elderly post mistress foiled an armed bandit who tried to hold up a post-sub office in Kilburn-lane, London, the other day.

Said Miss Esther Humphries:

"I just looked him straight in the eye and pressed the alarm bell." The gunman fled.—

DR RICHARD BEECHING... Man with a load on his mind

London.

A man, indistinguishable from the rest, stood on a platform of East Grinstead railway station one morning this week and waited for his train to Town.

The question is: did he happen to notice the hang of the East Grinstead stationmaster's jacket; the cut of his trousers and the shape of his lapels, and whether or not he wore the ensemble with dignity and pride?

It is understandable if he did not. Dr Richard Beeching had a lot on his mind that morning. Moreover, press and television cameras were trained upon him as he stood there.

It was his first day in a new job, which is always an unsettling business. And Dr Beeching was under no illusion about the reason for those cameras.

They were there because he is to be paid £24,000 a year for streamlining and revitalising British Railways, as Chairman of the British Transport Commission; and because, before he even reached his desk, there has already been an extremely public row about the scale of his remuneration.

The right and wrongs of all this, and whether or not the Government ought to compete in the dizzy auction for industry's best brains, are another issue, already quite well enough aired.

What concerns us at the moment is that stationmaster's jacket and trousers.

While Dr Richard Beeching was preparing to earn his first £112, a band of low-life railway servants were in glamorously dressed the stationmasters of Britain, at the annual conference of their union, the Transport Salaried Staffs Association.

BURNING SHAME

They were listening to stationmaster Mr. W. Cley, speaking of the burning shame with which he paces his platforms in his heavy, shapeless, fits-where-it-touches blue serge that has to last him for months yet.

"The uniform they've given me," lamented Mr. Cley (now dapper in his own civilian blue) "must have been made for Sabrina or Marilyn Monroe. We want uniforms that keep their shape better."

He wanted better material, better tailoring, a new suit every year instead of every 18 months. Was not the dignity of the stationmaster's calling impressed on each one of them at the outset? How could a man be dignified in baggy serge?

His heartily released a flood of pent-up anguish. Other stationmasters had been ashamed to pace their platforms too.

Heartsick, at his desk, had barely spent three hours enrolling his first £52 12s. before his first directive was on its way out to 600,000 British Railways employees. "Make no mistake," he said, "the whole future of the railways will be decided by what happens in the next few years."

An Exeter doctor has reported to the annual conference of the Devon Orthopaedic Association a new disease: "compensation neurosis."

The symptoms are paralysis of those who have been temporarily disabled through accidents. Recovery often occurs almost overnight, once the money is in their hands.

The curious thing is that the doctor refuses to label them all malingerers. Often, he says, they are not aware of their condition.

You can come untried, though. "I used to be able to raise my arm right up to here, Your Honour...."

London, June 6. Mr Cyril Osborne, Conservative Member of Parliament, would like to see other British newspapers besides the Daily Worker (Communist) sold in Russia.

He announced today that next week he intends to ask Mr Edward Heath, Lord Privy Seal in Parliament, if he is aware "that the only English language newspaper readily on sale in Russia is the Daily Worker."

IMPROVE RELATIONS

Mr Osborne will further ask Mr Heath if he will approach the Soviet Government "to give equal facilities for the sale of the other 23 newspapers which are distributed overseas at government expense, in particular the Times, Daily Telegraph and Guardian."

He thinks this will improve Anglo-Soviet relations by conveying a balanced idea of the United Kingdom to the Russian people.—China Mail Special.

Cambridge, June 6. A motion proposing that women should be allowed to become honorary members of the Cambridge University Union Society was rejected at a private business meeting of the Society last night.

The Union's President, Mr Colin Renfrew, said after the meeting that the proposal did not gain the necessary three-quarters majority.

He added, however, that the matter may be considered again next term.—China Mail Special.

LET'S BARTER OUR BRAINS FOR A PLACE IN THE MOON RACE

By CHAPMAN PINCHER

AFTER three years of pretending that it did not really matter who got to the moon first, the U.S. has formally taken up the Russians' challenge to race them there.

The technical resources of the world's two most powerful nations are to be harnessed to this tremendous adventure which will fill the next nine years with wonder. What a time to be alive! What an adventure to be in! What an adventure for Britain to be in!

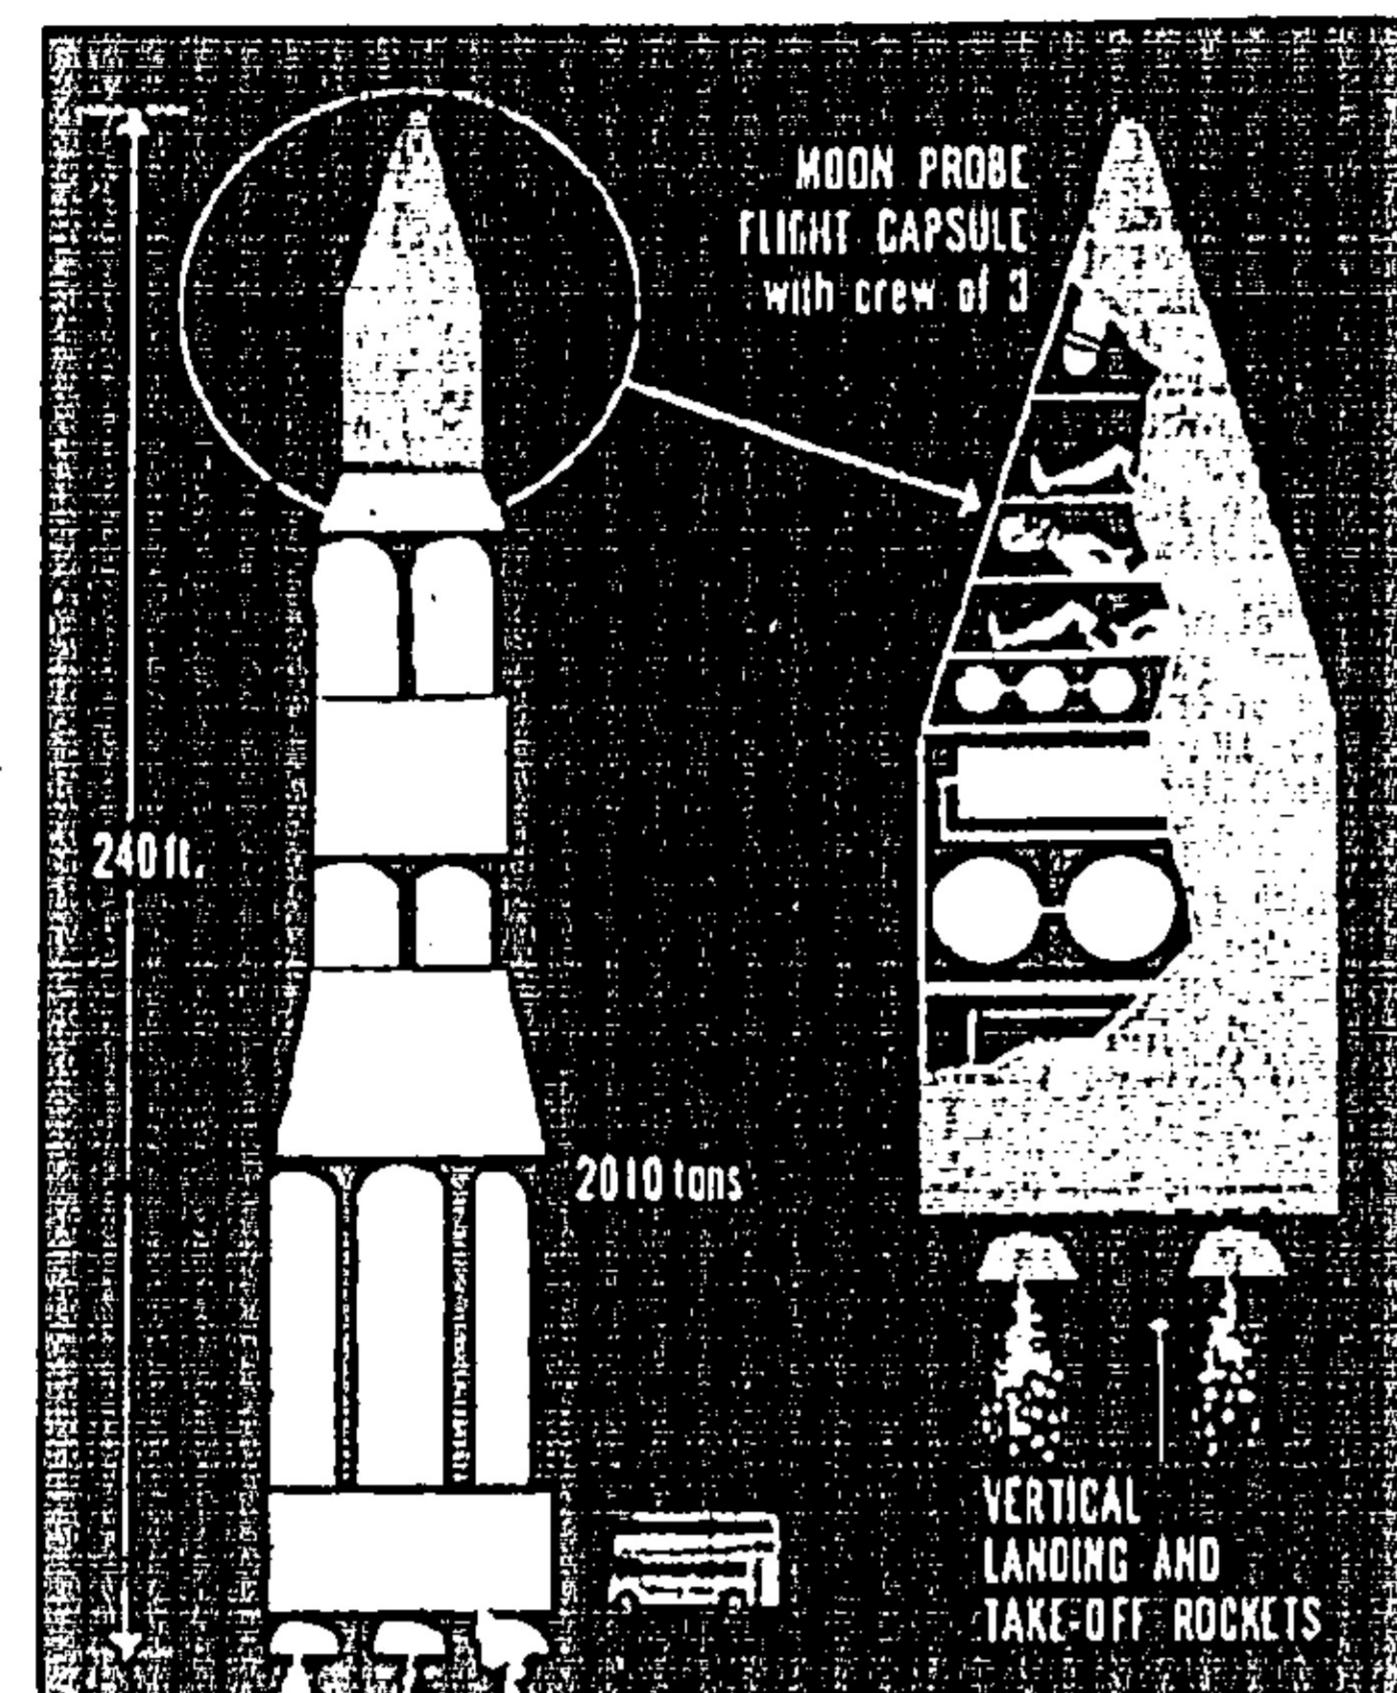

The cost of a crash programme to put an American on the moon and bring him back alive is estimated at £14,000 million. The Russians, who will undoubtedly speed up their endeavours, must be facing similar costs.

Can this colossal outlay be justified for such a Jeff Hawke concept? Look at it this way: Spread over nine years it will cost the 182 million people of the American nation about 8d. a day per head.

EMPIRES

Breathes there a Briton with spirit so dead that he would not chip in the price of two cigarettes a day to get the Union Jack planted first in the moon's crust?

What can Britain do while the two great contestants gallantly go into space? Whatever may be decided about communication by satellites and other rocket development. Even with the enormous new dollar grant, the U.S. experts privately admit that their chances of overtaking the Russians before 1970 are slim. Because it is the supply of scientific and engineering brains which eventually limits the speed of such a project.

This is the rocket system the Americans plan to use to put their first men on the moon. The space-ship on top is an "Apollo" three-man moon-probe capsule to be launched on its 240,000-mile trip by the Nova rocket — a 2,010-ton monster.

Britain has talent, ideas, and equipment acknowledged to be the world's finest in radar. These could make a vital contribution to the success of the moon flights.

Part of the new U.S. effort is to be concentrated on the development of atomic propulsion for manned spaceships. Britain has unsurpassed atomic scientists anxious to apply themselves to this problem now that nuclear bomb work is suspended.

What would Britain get out of it? The Apollo spacecraft, which is to be used by the U.S. to land on the moon, will carry THREE men.

One of these could be a Briton if Mr Macmillan gets now and offers all possible help to the Americans in their courageous attempt to show that a free society can beat a dictatorship.

The Americans are years behind the Russians in big (London Express Service).

THE BRAINS

Certainly not, if we cannot tick the Americans or the Russians in the 240,000-mile race to the moon, then let us join them. A joint project with the Russians is impossible not only politically but because they will never share their missile secrets.

A joint moon project with the Americans is not only feasible but the only sensible step for both nations.

It is impossible to enjoy idling thoroughly unless one has plenty of work to do.

The battle of Alabama THE KENNEDYS WERE CRACKING AMERICAN HEADS BUT THE ECHO WAS HEARD IN VIENNA

Washington.

A TOUSLE-HAIRED young man in a crumpled sweater and crooked tie slumped back in the rear seat of a big Government limousine in the first light of the Washington dawn the other day and reflected on the most momentous night of his career.

Robert Kennedy, the 34-year-old brother of the President of the United States, was heading for bed after his second consecutive night manning the command telephone in what has become the general headquarters in a critical battle for America's good name.

For while a crazed mob was trying to batter its way into a Negro church hall in Montgomery, Alabama, President John Kennedy was preparing to leave for a momentous meeting with Mr Khrushchev.

The importance of this was not lost on young Bob Kennedy, the Attorney-General, who did more than any other to ensure the election of his brother to the presidency.

He now knows his ruthlessness in Montgomery has proved two vital points for the new U.S. Administration.

Ready ...

It has proved to the rabid racists of the Southern American States that the new Government is ready to use the harshest measures to protect coloured Americans struggling to assert their rights under existing Federal law.

And it has proved to an anxious world that the Kennedy brothers are as ready to defend the ideals of individual liberty within the borders of the United States as they are to act outside.

In the uncertain atmosphere following the Cuban fiasco, it is also a contribution to American self-respect that can hardly be exaggerated.

Robert Kennedy dealt with the situation in his panelled office. Lounging in his big swivel chair he barked out some of the toughest, harshest orders that America has yet heard in the growing battle for Negro rights.

Heads high

In constant direct contact with his deputy, Oxford-trained

By IANAITKEN

John ("Whizzer") White, he directed armed men who were themselves Southerners to carry out their duty against fellow white Southerners in protection of black men.

The situation has been compared with President Eisenhower's decision to send in the troops against the anti-segregationists of Little Rock,

Arkansas, in the school integration crisis of 1957.

But they are determined to go through with it. And the surging success of Bobby's mastery generalship in Montgomery has served only to strengthen that conviction.

Already the Communist propaganda machine all over the world is grinding into action to make the most of the grim story of Montgomery as the Negro movement for civil rights and human

Rupert and Gwyneth—34

The witch's broom is still resting quietly in its corner as the pals approach and at Rupert's call it quivers and moves over to him. "Now where I live," he cries, "Now to see if we can both sit on the handle. Yes, look there's just room." The owl and the black cat have followed and are watching them. "How useful is your skin," Tabitha calls to them. "If you have the brush part in front it will go just where it wants, but if you have the handle in front you'll find that it will obey your wishes."

By the thousand

Kitty Copeland, one of the first wholesalers to get it off the production line early in February, have almost given up trying to keep count of sales.

"Hundreds and thousands," they say helplessly. "And it's gone out all over—we've sold it in South Africa, in New Zealand, in Australia."

Versions of the Blouson Dress are all over town. There are three on this page, and the only problem was choosing between so many pretty versions.

I've seen them in silk, in chiffon, in arnel-and-cotton, in Courtelle and in dacron... all of them the soft flou fabrics of sales are astronomical. Peter Robinson, whose sharp-eyed fashion expert Francois Gurrigues plucked it out at once in Paris as a most-likely-to-succeed line, have had it in stock since early February—and sales continue unabated. In the fickle treacherous world of fashion, one senses their deep affection for such a steady winner.

Super-1961

In the first place, it's a YOUNG winner—it's highest sales have been in the small and snappy shops, the wide-awake chain groups whose customers are teenage upwards—Fifth Avenue, Fenwicks, Penberthys, Richard Shops, Walls Shops.

These are the girls with money to fling around on a house who were instructed to pretty dress today, and for their send the clothes—made to Jacie's exact measurements—to a fictitious Washington name and address.

In the second place, it is a success that was designed, and ordered AFTER Paris—another clinched argument in favour of greater flexibility at wholesale level.

Most wholesale houses have shut up their order books for spring and summer by the previous November. A great many shops still spend most of their season's budget around the same time.

So when a post-Paris excitement of this kind happens, neither is in a position to take advantage of it. Which seems a pity. From everybody's point of view.

TOO MANY PARIS LABELS

WHAT fun to be Jackie Kennedy... Or is it? Jackie may well be wondering.

A storm is brewing up in America once more over the thorny question of where exactly Jackie buys her clothes, and Women's Wear Daily, the bible of the American wholesale trade, is sniffing around for proof that too many items in her wardrobe still have that villainous Paris label inside them... And she promised.

Damning facts so far touted out by WWD tell of an order received by a well-known Paris

CHILDREN'S CORNER

How Old Is Joe?

—Shadows Try But Can't Guess Smokey's Age—

By MAX TRELL

SLOWLY and lazily Smokey Joe came curling up out of Father's pipe. Father never even noticed. He was busy reading his newspaper. But Knauf and Hand, the Shadow Children with the Turned-About Names, watched him as they sat in a dark corner on the opposite side of the room.

Joe floated across the room just underneath the ceiling with his long legs stretched out and his hands folded behind his head. Then he saw Knauf and Hand waving to him.

Floated down

He let himself slowly and lazily float down through the air until he came to rest without even the whisper of a sound right between them.

In all this time he never unstretched his long legs or unfolded his hands from behind his head.

The two Shadows greeted him. Then Knauf said, smiling: "Smokey Joe, you're certainly lazy tonight."

Joe yawned a long, slow, very lazy yawn.

"I'm getting old," he finally said.

They just laughed

Knauf and Hand laughed. They never thought of Joe as being old. They were sure he wasn't.

"Do you know how old I am?" asked Joe. "Take a guess."

Knauf and Hand thought to themselves that Smokey Joe was only a puff of smoke that looked like a man. Most of the time he stayed in the stem of the bowl of Father's pipe. They were sure he was no older than the pipe.

"You're a year old," said Hand.

"Wrong," said Joe. He yawned again.

"Year and a half and a month and a week and two hours," said Knauf, making a long guess.

"You're certainly lazy tonight," said Knauf to the yawning Joe.

"Like what?" asked Knauf, sounding as if he still didn't really believe the things that Joe was talking about.

"Like big Animals—enormous Animals!" said Joe.

"Bigger than Elephants?" asked Knauf.

"Ten times bigger than Elephants," answered Joe. "And strange Birds with leathery wings. And Seamonsters, and Dragons and..."

No such animals

Hanid stopped Joe.

"Now, Joe dear, you know very well that there aren't any such things as Dragons. They're just make-believe Animals. They only live in fairytale books."

"No sirree!" said Joe. "The Dragons I saw were real, live Dragons, except that they didn't have smoke coming out of their nostrils. But they looked like Dragons and they were just as fierce."

And I saw blades of grass as tall as a ten-storey building!"

"Well, Joe, you'll be moving back to my bed. I'm really feeling old and tired tonight," said Joe.

Laid down pipe

Over on the other side of the room Father had knocked the ashes out of his pipe and laid the pipe on a pipe-rack.

"My bed's all ready for me," said Joe, when he gave himself a push with his toes and went floating slowly and sleepily across the room.

"Good night, kids," said Knauf and Hand.

And the next minute Joe curled up and slid inside the pipe with just the tip of his nose showing over the side like a wisp of smoke.

Out of volcano

"Like a chimney," Joe put in. "And smoke comes out," said Hand.

"So," said Joe as he continued with his story. "I came out of a volcano. I went floating around. I went all over the world. And I saw strange sights all those billions of years ago."

long suit, South won in dummy and led the queen of spades. Needless to say, East played low and South had a real duplicate player's problem.

If East had led a singleton and the spade finesse lost, East would get to ruff a diamond and South would be held to four.

Finally, South decided this was the case so he went up with the ace of spades. Now East made his king of spades and held South to five odd.

Strangely enough, this made no difference in match points. All other North-South pairs happened to be in a bidding mood. They all bid six spades and took the finesse.

Thais on way to Thomas Cup final

STAR-STUDDED DANISH TEAM TRAILS 1-3 AFTER FIRST NIGHT'S ZONE FINAL MATCHES

Djakarta, June 6. Thailand, which swept into badminton fame in the last Thomas Cup Tournament three years ago, took an unexpected three to one lead over Denmark in their first night's matches of this year's Zone Final here tonight.

The young team of Thai players, newcomers to international badminton, completely outplayed and outclassed seasoned Danish stars like Finn Kobro, Erlend Kopa and Hauke Hansen to win the night's honours for their country.

Erlend Kopa clinched the only point for Denmark, the European and American Zone winners, by defeating Thailand's Narong and Raphi defeated Denmark's Hansen and Kobro 15-13, 15-11.

The 3-1 lead for Thailand put the Asians in a strong position to win the Zone Final and gain the right to meet Finland in the Cup Final. The Thais need only two wins in tomorrow's three singles and two doubles matches.

Young Thai player Chan-nareng Ratanasengsang, competing in his first international tournament, evened the match score to one-all by defeating the celebrated Danish ace Finn Kobro in straight sets 17-16, 15-13.

The Danes on the other hand would need four wins in the five matches to pull out a victory.—AFP.

DRAMAS OF THE ASHES

The historic Brisbane match of last December has been called the greatest Test of all time. It was the first Test to end in a tie... a drama that revitalised the game after many lean years.

But there have been comparable dramas in cricket history and no two countries have provided so many sensations as England and Australia—in the battle for The Ashes.

Was there ever a more fantastic series than that of 1902 when England won a Test by one wicket and lost another by five runs? Or such controversy as that which surrounded the "body-line bowling" Tests?

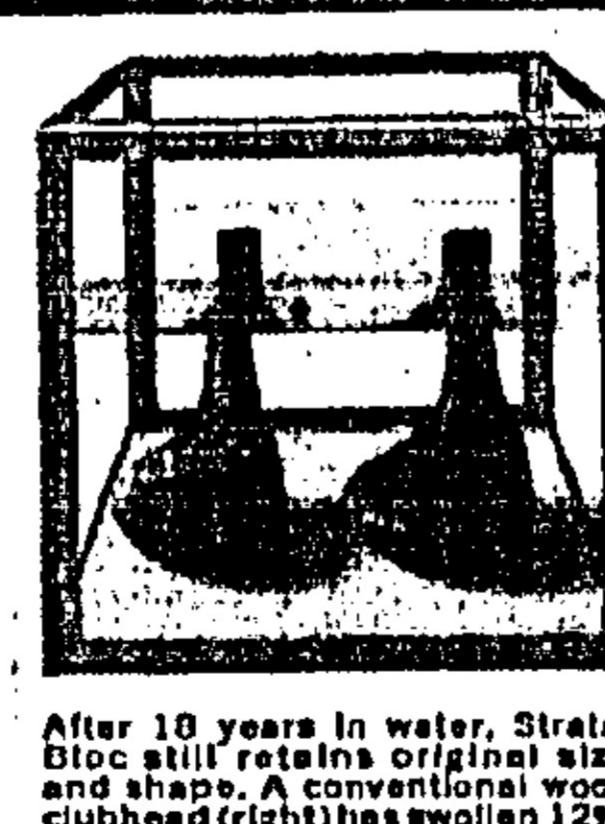

Were there ever greater individual performances than Len Hutton's marathon 364-runs innings at the Oval in 1938 and Jim Laker's incredible 19-90 bowling figures in the 1956 Manchester Test?

These are just a few of the great days of cricket recalled by John McIlvain in DRAMAS OF THE ASHES—a six-part series that spans nearly 60 years of England-Australia cricket and recaptures the glory of such giants as Hirst and Rhodes, Jessop and Trumper, Bradman and Hutton, Larwood and Laker, and Lindwall and Miller. The first instalment of this series appears in tomorrow's China Mail. Don't miss it.

Jimmy Hill: Football League has gone back on an agreement

London, June 6. Jimmy Hill, Chairman of the Professional Footballers' Association, spoke of the Football League "dishonouring an agreement" when he flew into London Airport today.

He had cut short his visit to Canada in order to discuss with the Association's Secretary, Mr Cliff Lloyd, the latest developments in the dispute with the League.

The Minister's job

At the airport he said: "I will need to consult with the Secretary to find out the full details. But I have a rough idea of what has happened. Certainly the League has gone back on the agreement of January 18."

Hill went on: "I don't know why. We thought we had achieved the fairest compromise possible. We bent over backwards to find the right wording for the agreement."

He said that, apart from rumours, he had no suspicion of any opposition to the agreement.

"Now it must be a matter for the Minister. It is his worry as much as ours. I have wondered what happens when one of the parties in an industrial dispute dishonours the agreement in this way."

Hill added: "The Minister must have bigger guns to bring to bear than we have."

Sussex hold Australians to thrilling draw

Hove, June 6. In a pulsating finish to a match packed with drama and incident, the Australian cricket tourists drew with Sussex today.

The tourists, set to get 240 in 210 minutes to win, were nine runs short of their target with one effective wicket in hand when time ran out.

With Norman O'Neill absent, trying out his injured knee at the nets, in the final, the Australian's last pair were together when the last over was called.

Eight wickets had fallen for 228 as slow-left-arm bowler Ron Bell began the final over to Colin McDonald with 17 runs still wanted.

Century-maker McDonald took four and then hit a no-ball to the boundary, so that nine were needed off the last two deliveries.

McDonald was content to prod them back to the bowler, and finished with a magnificent unbroken 110, which included 15 fours.

Fine bowling

Fine bowling by the tall, fair-haired Frank Misson had put the Australians within sight of victory this morning. He struck good form just at the right time with the first Test only two days away.

Misson maintained an accurate length and attacked the stumps all the time to return six for 75—his best figures of the tour—in the dismissal of Sussex for 189.

Don Smith, who retired hurt for five after being struck on the head from a ball by Misson last night, did not resume his innings for Sussex.

The Australians, threatened with having to follow-on at one stage yesterday, looked set to win today when McDonald and Alan Davidson hit 74 in 41 minutes for the fourth wicket, but then came an alarming collapse.

Bell, the 30-year-old former Middlesex player and Chelsea footballer, bagged three wickets for £150,000 and as a result of the new acquisition, Messrs Buxton and Clark thought of the idea of taking a round-the-world trip with the team visit all the world's top clubs and find out if there are any new amenities they can introduce to the City Tattersalls Club.

After Bell had bowled Davidson, skipper Richie Benaud was brilliantly caught at slip by Alan Oakman for his third duck in a row, and then Wally Grout was superbly run out by substitute fielder Bob Fountain.

Graham McKenzie was caught to give Bell his third wicket off 12 deliveries at a cost of two runs.

It now looked as if Sussex would be the first side to beat the tourists and gain their first win over an Australian side this century. But McDonald was dropped by Oakman when he had scored 86 out of 189, and this proved to be the turning point.

Aby supported by Misson, the Australian opener reached his 100 in three and a quarter hours. Misson was finally bowled by Bales after the stand had put on a match-saving 41, but by then there was only one over left.

They made it with two balls of the extra half hour to spare thanks to a fine performance by Don Wils, playing with his left wrist in plaster, who hit 20 in an unfinished stand of 37 with Bob Platt.

England pace bowler Freddie Trueman had earlier shown encouraging form for the first Test which starts against Australia at Edgbaston on Thursday, by taking four for 50 in Worcestershire's second innings.

Another England man in form was off-spinner David Allen, whose great all-round performance gave Gloucestershire a two-wicket victory over Essex. He had match figures of nine for 109 and hit 50 not out in the second innings.

Lucky break

The match seemed to be slipping away from Gloucestershire until Allen took charge. His 50, which included eight fours, was the highest individual score of the match and was hit on a badly worn pitch.

Glamorgan seemed set for a good win over Hampshire after the opening pair had hit 102 of the 257 runs needed for victory, but after losing their first wicket in unusual fashion they crumbled and the other nine wickets could add only 81 runs.

The capture of the first Glamorgan wicket was a lucky break for Hampshire.

Jones cracked a ball back towards the bowler. It looked to be going for four, but Derek Shackleton managed to divert it

THE COLDEST CHANNEL SWIM

Dover, June 6. Dorothy Perkins, a factory worker born in Bradford, today won the distinction of making the earliest swim of the year in record in the frigid waters of the 2½-mile English Channel.

The youthful long-distance swimmer was timed in 21½ hours from Calais, France, to Silver Beach, six miles north of Dover.

Never before had any successful swimming of the treacherous waters of the Channel been accomplished this year. Most swimmers wait until July, August or September when the waters warm up considerably to make their attempts.

The pretty English girl was near collapse when she walked out of the water to be cheered by a crowd of 300. She had swum nearly four hours to swim the last four miles.

Her first words as she was enclosed in the arms of her mother and father were: "I'm very tired and all I want is a good night's sleep."

Miss Perkins, then walked back into the water, boarded the small power vessel which had guided her across the Channel and sailed off to nearby Dover.—AFP.

County Cricket

YORKSHIRE CHALK UP 5th WIN IN SIX MATCHES

London, June 6.

English County Cricket champions Yorkshire scored their fifth win in six Championship matches this season and strengthened their position at the top of the table, but they had a tremendous struggle before winning by one wicket against Worcestershire at Worcester today.

Set to get 100 runs for victory in 230 minutes, Yorkshire lost wickets cheaply and when the last pair came together they still needed 30 runs to win.

They made it with two balls of the extra half hour to spare thanks to a fine performance by Don Wils, playing with his left wrist in plaster, who hit 20 in an unfinished stand of 37 with Bob Platt.

England pace bowler Freddie Trueman had earlier shown encouraging form for the first Test which starts against Australia at Edgbaston on Thursday, by taking four for 50 in Worcestershire's second innings.

RIGHT: Bobby Neill, the indestructible one-time featherweight boxing champion of Britain, was recently married to 25-year-old Lauri Steadman, a blonde and beautiful night club dancer.

Bobby's career as a boxer was marred by accidents. When he was 17, and already a promising performer, his right thigh bone was crushed in a road accident. Doctors who pieced it together with a silver plate said he would be lucky to walk again. Eighteen months later they took the plaster off, and Bobby immediately started his return to the ring.

Then came a disastrous fight with Terry Spinks, last November. Terry won, and Bobby was rushed to hospital, seriously ill with a blood clot on the brain. A life-or-death operation, plus his courage and endurance, saved him.

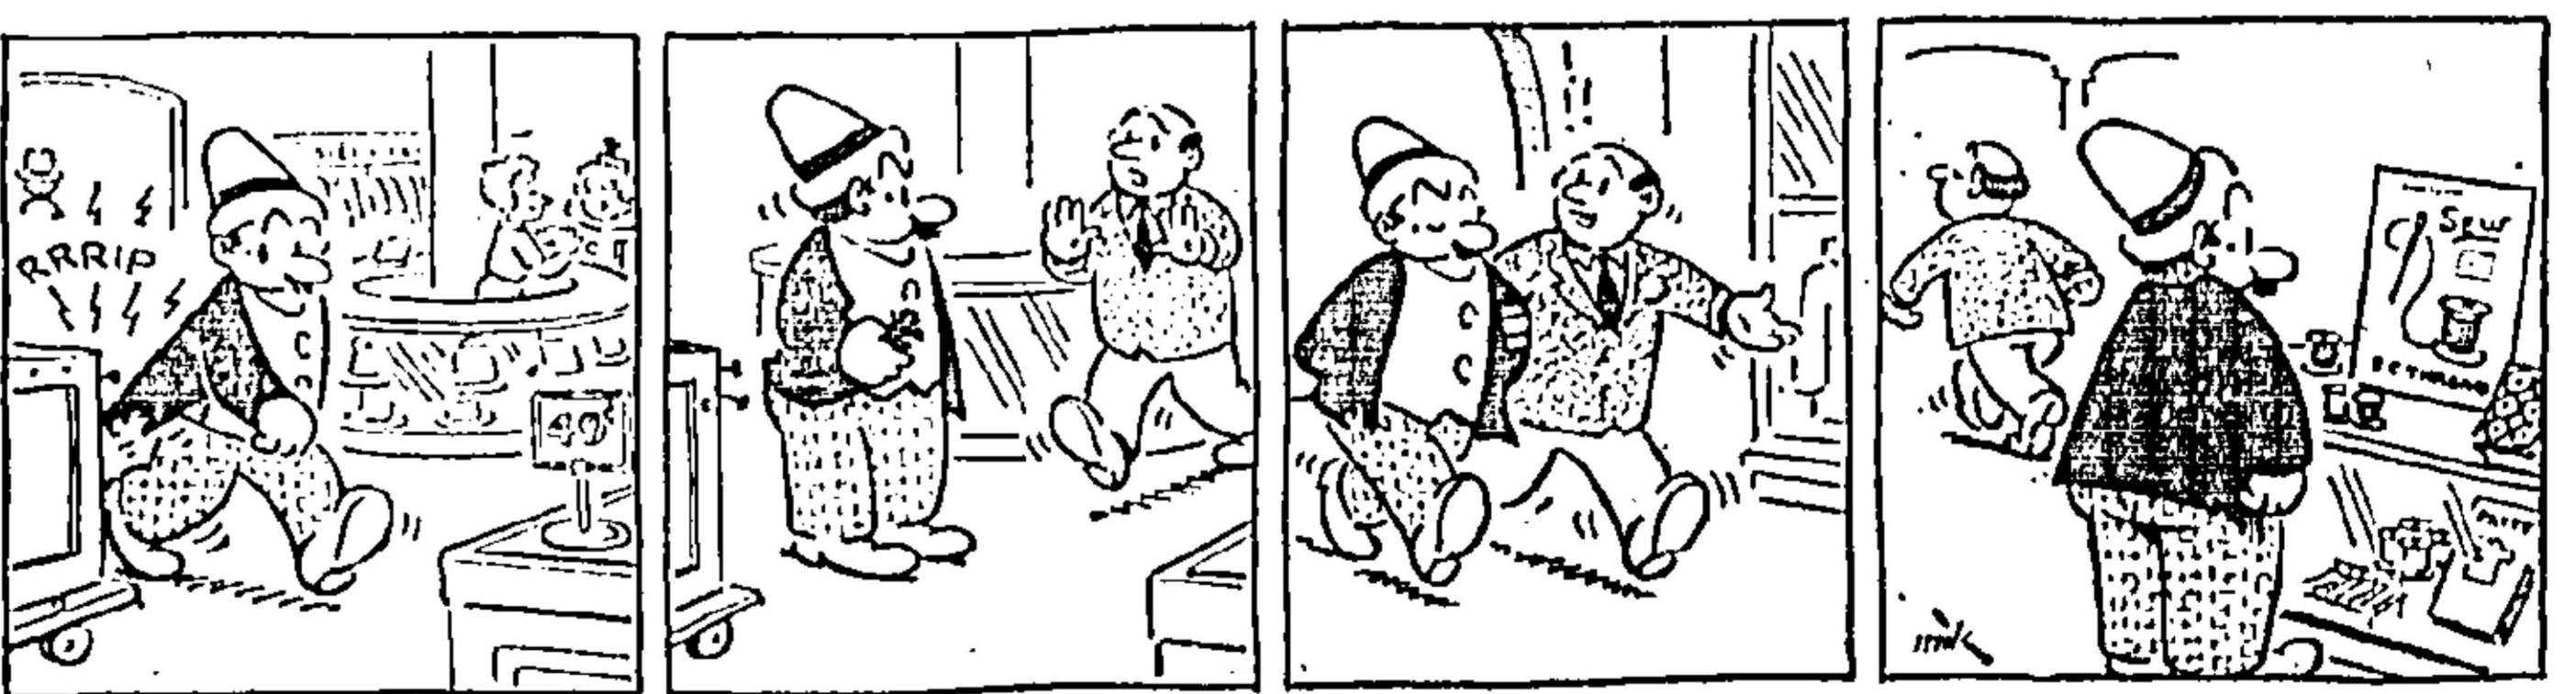

Lauri Steadman, whom he had first met while he was on holiday in Jersey, visited him almost daily in hospital, and it was while he was lying in bed that he decided to propose to her.

PICTORIAL PARADE

An African princess is among the circle of friends that Prince William of Gloucester has gathered around him during his first year at Magdalene College, Cambridge. She is Princess Elizabeth Bagaya, and she comes from Uganda, where her father is the 25 stone Omukama of Toro. The Princess is 24, and in her first year at Girton. Like the Prince, she is reading history. They see each other regularly in the Whim, Cambridge's cafe rendezvous, and she refers to him simply as "William."

What would have been a royal flush in any other country is now a Republican Flush in South Africa. Aces, kings, queens and jacks are barred to card players, and replaced, as shown, by President, Kommandor, Vrouw, and Boer. The ace-president is, of course, Kruger.

Fined $250 for breaking traffic law

Lau Wing-kan, a Ravenu Office, living at 254 Queen's-road East, third floor, was fined $250 by Mr N. R. Wylio at North Kowloon Magistracy this morning when he was found guilty on a summons of dangerous driving along Castle Peak-road on January 30.

Lau had pleaded not guilty through his solicitor Mr J. B. C. Slack.

Lt. Charles Edward Davies of 14 Field Regt, testified that at about 9.45 am on January 30 he was a passenger seated in an army vehicle going along Castle Peak-road towards Kowloon.

He said when his vehicle approached the crest of a hill near 6-mile stone, he saw a heavy lorry in front of him. His vehicle overtook this lorry from the right side of the road.

He said the defendant, who was following the army vehicle in a government van also overtook this lorry but mounted the pavement on the left.

Lt. Davies said the driver braked violently to avoid a collision. He added that he noted down the number of the vehicle driven by the defendant and later reported the matter to the police.

Insp. F. J. Cullen of the Traffic Office, Kowloon, said that at about 8.15 am on Feb. 11 the defendant went to the traffic office and admitted that he had driven that government vehicle on that way and at that time and place.

He added that he then summoned Lau.

JUNE 1936

IN the House of Commons Mr Stephen Davies asked whether any British or Indian troops, or warships, were being moved from the Hongkong area to Shanghai, and what instructions have been issued by the British Government as to whether in the event of hostilities between China and Japan entry into the international settlement, Shanghai, will be denied to all belligerent forces, or only to the Chinese as on a previous occasion.

Mr Eden replied that routine measures for the protection by both land and sea in a possible emergency of the centres of British interest had been taken, consisting in holding in readiness at Hongkong of a battalion for possible reinforcement of the British garrison in Shanghai. In the formulation of plans the despatch of units of the fleet to the ports affected had been considered.

Every effort would be made to keep the International Settlement free of all hostilities.

50 YEARS AGO

Extract from SCM Post 25 years ago column.

"By the death of Sir Hornusjee Mody, Hongkong mourns the loss of one of its most valued citizens. His public benefactions have deeply carved his name in the temple of honour and his memory will be revered for all time as one who loved the Colony and gave liberally of his means for the benefit of his fellow-men.

"Sir Hornusjee came to Hongkong fifty-three years ago, a young man and, as he himself frequently said, 'no scholar'; nevertheless he immersed himself so completely in the business and social pursuits of the place that he was never once able to leave it.

"Gifted with the capacity for making two ears of corn grow where only one grew before, Sir Hornusjee, in the prosperous days of the Colony amassed wealth, and apart from his many private benefactions, the extent of which will probably never be known, he conceived the idea of giving to others that which circumstances had deprived him in his own youth, namely a liberal education".
